

Integration of Women into the Job Market in Rural Burundi: The Case of PROMOST Project

Joyce KASONI

EIMAS
EUROPEAN INTERDISCIPLINARY
MASTER AFRICAN STUDIES
Erasmus Mundus Joint Master Degree

“In a word where women are still largely under represented in the labour market, efforts to achieving gender parity is met with a number of challenges. Looking closely at the PROMOST project in Burundi, this thesis aimed at identifying factors influencing women empowerment, their participation in TVET (particularly male dominated trades) and their integration in the labor market after training. “

“What influences their choice....?”

“What limits or facilitate their integration in the labor market...?”

“Was empowerment successful...?”

A woman in a male dominated Trade

VS

Women in a female dominated Trade

CONTACT

joycekasoni@gmail.com,
Linkedin